Kidnap and Ransom Insurance

Tech Companies

Working with brokers, underwriters at Specialty Group, a member of Tokio Marine HCC, can design a tailored program that addresses the wide range of exposures facing tech companies and the employees that represent them worldwide.

Why Tech Companies are at Risk:

- Greater dependency of business models on a working cyber network
- Complex databases filled with confidential customer information
- Potential breaches in networks from anywhere in the world
- Well-known and high-visibility founders and executives
- Frequent business travel to high risk locations, including Southeast Asia

The past few decades have seen a dramatic increase in technological innovation. While this innovation has made millions of lives easier, it has also opened up new opportunities for criminals to exploit these advances. An increasing number of firms have fashioned business models dependent on the integrity of their cyber networks and the extortion risk associated with these networks has risen proportionally. Confidential information, including that of a firm's own customers, must be protected at all costs. A kidnap and ransom policy with Specialty Group helps mitigate these risks to ensure the firm's long-term viability.
